

THE KISS THAT MADE TOWN FAMOUS

Bartlett, Originator of Black Walnut Candy To Visit San Berdoo

"On with the dance, let joy be unconfined" is the slogan "Tom" Bartlett, the live-wire candy man of Torrance, is using today in saluting his many friends, the explanation being that he is about to give another of his popular street dances and is determined that it will be the biggest success of the season.

Tom claims that he has been in direct communication with the weather man, and that the latter has definitely promised "clear and warmer" weather for tomorrow night, when the big doings comes off.

Bartlett has engaged four noted jazz artists whose music is irresistible, and everything is set for the big night.

The affair tomorrow night was arranged after careful inquiry, as to dates for other attractions, and only after it was found that no other social affair was being held.

The free street dance is a sort of quasi-farewell affair, for on the following day the well-known candy man leaves for the Orange Show at San Bernardino, where he has engaged a forty-foot booth for the display and sale of the well-known Torrance confection, the noted Black Walnut Kisses—the kiss that made Torrance famous.
